State Normal School

AT FITCHBURG, MASSACHUSETTS

The End and The Means

The Fitchburg State Normal School, in common with all the Massachusetts normal schools, is maintained by the commonwealth for the purpose of preparing teachers for its schools.

The public school is the instrument of society for initiating its new members, civilizing them, and preparing them for the world's work.

To teach is to help another to learn. The teacher must understand how children learn, what they need to learn, and how to induce them to learn when they are not eager to do so. The task of the normal school is to lead its students into this understanding, to practice them in giving this help in the most intelligent, sympathetic, and skillful way of which they are capable, and to set before them ideals toward which they will continue to strive as long as they continue to teach.

Our normal schools, if they are to prepare their students to teach, must have students who are fit, mentally, physically, and morally, to help children learn what modern conditions demand. The prime qualifications for teaching are to be earnest and to be teachable. The state is searching for people who possess these qualifications, who are in earnest to serve, and who will make it their earnest purpose to help children on toward the highest possible usefulness. To this end it has placed normal schools where they will be accessible to all the towns that employ teachers and to those that furnish the teachers.

Location

The Fitchburg normal school is located where it is readily accessible to a large portion of the state and particularly to the northern portion. It is far enough retired from the busy part of the city to be in a measure secluded, but near enough to have the benefit of the advantages the city offers to students. It is situated on high land, over-looking a varied and beautiful landscape, in full view of Mt.

Wachusett whose summit house at certain seasons reflects the rising sun at such an angle that it glistens and glows like a beacon blazing on the mountain top.

Two lines of trolley cars passing the grounds connect with a network of railways radiating in many directions and to long distances. Fitchburg is also exceptionally favored with steam railway lines, extending to the north, west, south, southeast, and by way of Ayer (where connections are close) again radiating east, northeast, and west, so that students may come daily from all directions, and those from greater distances may go home frequently for week ends.

This convenience of transportation makes easily possible occasional visits from parents and friends and from local school officials whose visits are always welcome, and all of whom should feel it a privilege and a duty to keep in touch with their students and with the instructors of their students.

Buildings and Equipment

There are upon the school grounds four large buildings, beside the main building, in which are situated most of the normal school classrooms, library, laboratories, etc. Two of these buildings are dormitories, provided with all conveniences and accommodating about one hundred and thirty students. At present these are sufficient to house all the young women students except the many whose homes are near, and at present none are obliged to seek lodgings outside. The young men find rooms in private houses, but most of them, and all the dormitory students, take their meals in a large dining-hall in one of the dormitories.

Two of the buildings are both designed and used for practice schools, one for the first six grades, the other for grades seven and eight. The latter is conducted upon the Junior high school plan, with differentiated courses and department teaching.

These two schools, with two of the city schools which have been placed under the direction of the normal school, afford opportunity for a variety of practice teaching, adapted to the several courses described below.

The building occupied by the Junior high school is provided with shops in which the children are trained in the various practical arts, and the men in the Practical Arts course have opportunity for both shop training and practice teaching.

Students' Work at The Greenhouse

Parents will render a service, both to their children and to the state, by helping to convince their sons and daughters who are in training as teachers, of the value to them for all future time, both professionally and personally, of early acquiring those habits that promote physical and social welfare under the conditions they are likely to meet. The support of parents is especially needed in the case of students who live at home. The necessity of yielding some degree of individual freedom in order to secure greater freedom within the group is readily recognized by students in the dormitories, but this important lesson is often missed by those who reside away from the school. Regularity of meals and of study hours is an obvious necessity in the group. It is equally desirable for the individual. The homes will not only reinforce the school but will confer a real benefit upon their students by encouraging them to maintain the same daily routine as is followed by the dormitory students.

Course For Elementary Teachers

This school, in common with the other normal schools of this state and of most of the states, maintains a two year course for the training of teachers for the elementary schools. The minimum essentials in each subject of this course have been outlined tentatively for all the Massachusetts schools, and these outlines are being tried out by each school in its own way.

Until the tentative courses now in preparaion are in more settled form it does not seem profitable to summarize them in print. Accordingly the curriculum of the school appears herein in tabular form only, without amplification of the subject matter.

As appears from the accompanying table the elementary course in this school conforms substantially to the plan outlined for the two-year course in all the state normal schools, but lays especial emphasis upon the so-called practical arts. The attempt is made to apply in all the courses of this school the principle of beginning with the concrete and immediately useful and leading the pupil on to general conclusions and to that recognition of deferred values which characterizes civilized life, as distinguished from primitive life wherein men dwell only in the present.

Course For Junior High School Teachers

The advanced course is offered for students who desire to teach in higher grammar grades or in junior high schools. The first year of this course is identical with that of the elementary course. Although the advanced course covers four years it is essentially a three-year course. The third year is in teaching service on salary under some supervision of normal instructors but wholly free from study or instruction in the normal school. Because of this plan, the students bring to their final year a maturity of mind and a background of experience which makes possible a more advanced and more inclusive program than could be given to the same students immediately upon the completion of the first two years.

While personality enters largely into the competition, and, particularly in the present acute demand for teachers, graduates of the elementary course sometimes go directly into positions as good as do the graduates of the advanced course, the fact remains that employers who visit the normal school in search of teachers for the higher grades invariably canvass the four-year students first. Again, the tendency in the state, and in other states as well, is more and more to recognize superior training in fixing salary schedules, and to insist upon it for promotion to higher positions.

This course is especially recommended to those who hope for advancement to supervisory positions or principalships.

Both the elementary and the advanced courses are open to men as well as to women.

Practical Arts Department

The Practical Arts Course prepares young men for teaching the manual arts to boys in grade schools, junior and senior high schools, and continuation schools. It is planned as a three-year course but may be completed by a good student in two years and three summer terms. One who enters in July and attends continuously may thus graduate in August of the second year following. This means a forty-eight week year, seven hours per day, five and a half days per week.

The students are given training in woodworking, woodfinishing, painting and glazing, automobile repairs and other metal repair work, drafting, gardening, printing and bookbinding. They have instruction in English, mathematics related to the trades, science, psychology, and methods of teaching and administration, and they have opportunity to practice teaching shop-work in one of these departments to boys of the junior high school.

Unless they have had previous trade experience, it is not expected that students will go out prepared to teach these trades as trades; but they are given such an insight into all of them as will enable them to teach boys how to meet many of the problems of construction and repair that arise in the course of every day life. A student who before entering school, has had successful experience in any one trade may so supplement his command of that trade, by learning the elements of related trades, that he may be prepared to teach his own trade more successfully and to include in his instruction a wider range of projects than would otherwise be possible.

The course affords a special opportunity to men who have learned a trade and have discovered in themselves an aptitude for helping others to learn it. The state needs such men, and the men need to learn effective methods of teaching. Journeymen of any trade will find it worth while to inquire into the opportunities here afforded.

The graduates of this course are successfully filling places of responsibility in high schools, manual training schools, and continuation schools. The continuation schools are creating a new and urgent demand for men who can teach intelligently, and young men are going immediately to better paying positions than formerly were open to those with years of teaching experience.

Summer Term

The summer session of eight weeks serves to continue the elementary and practical arts courses, and enables students either to make up deficiencies or absences of previous terms, or to anticipate the work of future terms, and so to hasten the completion of their courses. Both courses may be abridged in this way. The instruction is given mainly by the same instructors as conduct the work during the year. The summer course also affords opportunity for teachers in service to improve themselves and refresh themselves upon their normal training. Opportunity is likewise afforded those who were forced to begin teaching without, or with only partial, normal training to make good this deficiency and to obtain credit toward a normal diploma without loss of their teaching time. Correspondence with such teachers, and with teachers out of the service who desire to return to it, is invited. A statement of the needs and desires of those who are considering attendance will assist in planning courses to meet the real demand.

Because of the opportunity afforded by the summer term for continuous work throughout the year, students are admitted to this school in July and February as well as in September. Application blanks will be sent upon request. Early applicants are favored in the choice of rooms.

Correspondence with regard to admission and to choice of course should be addressed to the principal.

Expenses

Tuition is free to residents of Massachusetts who declare intention to teach in the public schools of the commonwealth. Residents of other states, may be admitted upon payment in advance of a tuition fee of twenty-five dollars each semester, provided there is room for them.

The charge for room and board in the dormitories is $260 for the school-year of forty weeks, payable monthly in advance, and at the same rate during the summer term. This includes laundry to the amount of fifty-cents per week.

Application should be made early to insure a room for the coming year. Rooms are reserved in order of application upon deposit of six dollars and a half. This deposit will be credited for the first week's board in the fall but will not be refunded in case a student decides not to come.

Table board is supplied to those not rooming in the dormitories at a rate not exceeding $5.00 per week, payable weekly in advance.

Students who room in the dormitories should bring their own towels, sheets, blankets (for single bed), and pillow cases. All pieces of clothing will be marked at the laundry. Students may do their own work in a laundry-room in one of the dormitories, upon payment (in September), of two dollars for the use of this room for the year. A payment (also in September) of one dollar to cover cost of medicines, antiseptics, first aid, and incidental care for the year is required of all students living in the dormitories. All the young women in attendance should supply themselves with gymnasium suit and shoes, and with bathing cap for the showers.

Self Help and Pecuniary Aid

Earnest students to whom the expense is a serious obstacle may in many instances find opportunity to earn, if they will make known their needs and indicate the kind of work they are prepared to do.

There is also a fund appropriated by the state for the assistance of worthy students who are unable without assistance, or without over-taxing their strength, to meet the necessary expense. This is available only to Massachusetts students who come from outside of Fitchburg and who have been in attendance at least a half-year. The purpose of the state in providing this fund is to prevent the loss to its schools of trained teachers who might not otherwise be available. It is not at all in the nature of charity, but properly administered is money well spent. Students of the quality for which this aid is intended need therefore feel no hesitation when applying for it, and no humiliation in receiving it. If their time and strength permit, they may render in return some definite service. Applications for this aid should be made to the principal upon forms supplied for the purpose.

The Alumni Loan Fund is available to worthy students needing help. Sums not exceeding $100 annually will be loaned, to be repaid after graduation, at a low rate of interest.

ADMISSION

The candidate for admission to a Massachusetts state normal school as a regular student must have attained the age of seventeen years if a man, and sixteen years if a woman, on or before the first day of September in the year in which he seeks admission; must be free from disease, infirmities, or other defects which would unfit him for the office of teacher; must present a certificate of good moral character; must present evidence of graduation from a high school or equivalent preparation, and, in addition, offer such satisfactory evidence of scholarship as may be required by the regulations of the Department of Education. For the present, the topics included within the foregoing subjects will be such as are usually accepted by the Massachusetts colleges for entrance. The outlines submitted by the College Entrance Examination Board (Sub-station 84, New York City) will be found suggestive by high schools.

(C) Additional Subjects. At least 5 units from any of the foregoing subjects, or from other subjects approved by the high school towards the diploma of graduation of the applicant, representing work in any subjects approved for graduation, in addition to that for which credit is secured by examination or certification.

III

(A) Examinations. Each applicant for admission, unless exempted by the provisions of Sections IV and V, must pass entrance examinations in the subjects as required under "A" and "B". Examinations in these subjects will be held at each of the normal schools in June and September of each year. Candidates applying for admission by examination must present credentials or certificates from their schools to cover the requirements under "C", and will not be given examinations in these subjects. Persons not able to present these credentials must obtain credit for 15 units by examination in the subjects listed under "A" and "B".

(B) Division of Examinations. A candidate for admission to a normal school may take all the examinations at once, or divide them between June and September. A candidate will receive permanent credit for any units secured by examination or certification.

IV

Admission on Certificate. A graduate of a public high school, approved by the Department of Education, for purposes of certification to a state normal school, may be exempted by the principal of the normal school, from examination in any of the subjects under "A" and "B", in which the principal of the high school shall certify that the applicant is entitled to certification in accordance with standards as defined by the Department of Education.

Credits secured by any candidate from the Board of Regents of the State of New York, or for admission to any college in the New England College Entrance Certificate Board, either by examination or certification, or in the examinations of the College Entrance Examination Board, shall be accepted towards the total of 10 units under "A" and "B". In addition to the units granted by certification candidates must present credentials for subjects under "C".

V

Admission as Special Students. (A) When in any normal school, or in any department therein, the number of students entered as regular students and as advanced students at the opening of any school year is below the maximum number for which the school has accommodations, the Commissioner of Education may authorize the admission as a special student of an applicant who, being otherwise qualified, and who, having taken the entrance examinations, has failed to meet the full requirements provided in the regulations of the Department of Education, but who, nevertheless, is recommended by the principal of the normal school as, in his estimation, qualified to become a teacher. Such a special student shall be given regular standing only when he shall have satisfied all admission requirements, and when his work in the school, in the estimation of the principal, justifies such standing. The principal of the normal school shall report annually in October to the Commissioner as to all special students. Certificates may be granted to special students in accordance with regulations approved by the Department of Education.

(B) When in any normal school, or any course therein, the number of students entered as regular students, as advanced students, and as special students as defined in (A), at the opening of any school-year is below the maximum number for which the school has accommodations, the Commissioner may authorize the admission to any class as a special student, on the recommendation of the principal, of a person possessing special or exceptional qualifications for the work of such class. Such special students shall not be considered a candidate for a diploma until he shall have qualified as a regular student, but may, on the satisfactory completion of the work of the department, be granted a certificate to that effect by the Department of Education. The principal of the normal school shall report annually in October to the Commissioner as to all special students in the school under the provisions of this section.

VI

Admission as Advanced Students. A graduate of a normal school or of a college, or any person with not less than three years' satisfactory experience in teaching, may be admitted as a regular, or as an advanced student to any department under such regulation as may be approved by the Department of Education.

The foregoing requirements for admission to Massachusetts normal school are based upon the two following principles:

1. The only subject necessarily presupposed as a basis for normal school work is English. This is required of all candidates for admission. The entrance examination in English is in two parts—one part dealing with English expression, the other dealing with English literature.

2. In order to permit the variation in program in different high schools, and the variation of curricula for different pupils in the same school, and also to allow for the development of new subjects, a "free margin" of substantially one-half of the entire high school program is allowed.

Students who have completed the work of the third year of High School may present themselves in either June or September for examination in five of the seven units included under "B". The examination in English must be taken at the end of the fourth year.
